Dear Josh:

I wonder if by chance you saw this item in the Tuesday, March 13th issue of the Wall Street Journal. I met Professor Heyndrickx, who is quite a remarkable man, during the trip I made for U.S.I.A. through Europe last summer. Assuming his analysis is correct, as seems likely to be the case since he has been deeply involved in analysis of the mycotoxins, this item implies that there is something in the nature of a black market in the sale of the mycotoxins presumably starting in the Soviet Union or one of its surrogates.

Best regards,

Fred

A rather stupid enterprise on the part of the S.G.

*Thank you, Fred.
Yes, I've been following this closely and expect a detailed briefing on the data before too long.*
